AFTER GLOBAL FEMINIZATION:
INDUSTRIAL CHANGE AND
GENDER SEGREGATION

MARCH 20, 2015
1 - 6 PM
THE NEW SCHOOL
6 E 16th STREET
ROOM 1009

A one day workshop part of a joint New School-University of Göttingen research project on gendered labor market segregation in developing countries funded by the German Research Foundation (DFG)
1-1:15 INTRODUCTION
Will Milberg, Dean and Professor of Economics, The New School for Social Research

1:15-3:00 PANEL 1: Gendered Segregation and Labor Market Outcomes
Stephan Klasen (University of Göttingen)
“What Explains the Stagnation in Female Labor Force Participation in Urban India?”
Discussant: Yana van der Meulen Rodgers (Rutgers University)

Mary Borrowman (The New School) and Stephan Klasen (University of Göttingen)
“Drivers of Gendered Sectoral and Occupational Segregation in Developing Countries”
Discussant: Darrick Hamilton (The New School)

Stephanie Seguino (University of Vermont)
“Contradictory Global Trends in Gender Equality”
Discussant: Will Milberg (The New School)

3:15-5:00 PANEL 2: Gendered Effects of Industrial Change
Shaianne Osterreich (Ithaca College)
“Gender, Decent Work, and Global Production Sharing in Indonesia”
Discussant: Radhika Balakrishnan (Rutgers University)

Isis Gaddis (The World Bank, Gender Cross Cutting Solutions Area)
Discussant: Deborah Winkler (Schwartz Center for Economic Policy Analysis)

Papa Seck (UNWomen)
“Progress, Retrogression and Gender Equality at Work: Findings from Progress of the World’s Women 2015”
Discussant: Sakiko Fukuda-Parr (The New School)

5:00-6:00 ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION: Perspectives on and Future Research Directions in Gender, Development and Employment
Sakiko Fukuda-Parr (The New School)
Stephan Klasen (University of Göttingen)
Stephanie Seguino (University of Vermont)

3-3:15 COFFEE BREAK